2007 Large-Format Bookings Yearbook

Films and bookings of 2006

In 2006, repurposed Hollywood movies accounted for nearly half of all LF bookings, thanks to a film slate in which seven out of twelve new giant-screen releases were DMR titles. Three older feature films also ran in theaters in 2006. As shown in Chart 1 below, the increase in DMR bookings since 2003 corresponds to a decrease in original LF film bookings in a marketplace that is not expanding rapidly. (Note that the chart shows actual numbers, not percentages.)

However, 2006 may be a pinnacle for DMR films that will never be reached again. With the rapid expansion of digital cinema – 2D and 3D – and Imax Corporation's own digital projector expected in a few years, the conversion of feature films to 15/70 could soon be a thing of the past. So far, only three DMR films have been announced for 2007, and there are few obvious candidates among the studio releases set for the last half of the year. We believe 2007 is unlikely to see seven DMR releases, and may not even reach six.

Of six LF distributors who replied to our request for comments, three said that 2006 was worse for them than 2005 and blamed DMR films, two said 2006 was better, and one was new to the business and said it had a good first year. MacGillivray Freeman Films's Mike Lutz says he "estimate[s] that our gross distribution revenues were reduced by 15-20%...due to the way DMR dilutes the IMAX brand." Daniel White of Big Films, Inc., who distributes mostly older films from a variety of producers, said that "DMR helps to slam the doors on educational 'B' programming within the commercial markets and many of the institutions," a point echoed by Charlotte Brohi of the Houston Museum of Natural Science and John Wickstrom of Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry.

On the other hand, National Geographic's Mark Katz points out that because of the "very difficult (and in many ways financially unworkable) distribution model the studios force on LF theaters, [fewer] institutions are booking [DMR] films," making his job easier.

Trends during 2006

The average length of a booking dropped by about 7% in 2006, to 174 days. In itself, this is not unusual: the average booking has been declining for quite some time:

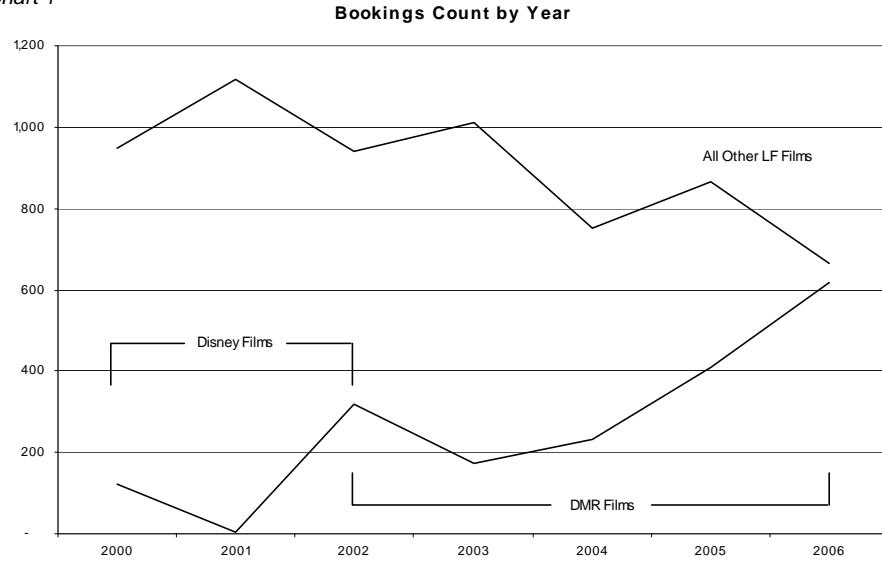

Table 1: Average booking length

Booking Started in	Average Length	% Change	Number Counted
1997	287		278
1998	246	-14.3	428
1999	234	-4.9	482
2000	218	-6.8	655
2001	214	-1.8	861
2002	220	2.8	940
2003	206	-6.4	1,010
2004	184	-10.7	835
2005	187	1.6	923
2006	174	-6.9	913

But when we separate out DMR films from the rest, we find that they are almost entirely responsible for lowering the average:

Thus, traditional non-fiction films appear to be running for roughly as long as they did before Hollywood entered the LF business in 2000 – about eight months. However, the fact that they are sharing screen time with more films has resulted in a net reduction in income per film to distributors. As shown in Table 3, the number of films actively in release has increased by more than 50% in the last ten years, from 84 in 1997 to about 130 for the last three years. The extensive selection of titles available has led theaters to increase the number of different films they show in a year, as seen in Table 4.

Top films of 2006

Looking at booking counts by film (see page 24), we see that of the top 10 films in 2006, only two were traditional non-fiction films, and they were high-profile 3D titles co-produced by Imax Corporation with its primary DMR partner, Warner Bros. Pictures: 2006's Deep Sea 3D and Magnificent Desolation (released in 2005). The remaining eight were DMR titles, six from Warner. The next highest non-DMR film released in 2006 is MacGillivray Freeman Films' Greece, at number 19.

Thus, in the past two years, Warner has become the world's largest LF distributor by a large margin. Looking at Table 5 below, we see that last year it had nearly twice as many bookings (598) as its closest rivals, Imax and National Geographic Giant Screen Film Distribution, each of whom had almost 320. And nearly 200 of Imax's bookings were of films it produced with Warner. Imax and Warner's combined total of over 900 is more than the combined total of the next seven LF distributors, two of which are also Hollywood studios, Sony Pictures Entertainment and Twentieth Century Fox.

The LF distribution market can be characterized as six "majors" – three studios, Imax, and two independents (Nat Geo and MacGillivray) – and about 14

"minors" whose combined bookings count (494) is less than Warner's total.

Effects of DMR films

A relatively small number of DMR films can dominate the LF market because of the differences in the business models used by Hollywood and LF producers. The effective theatrical window for a Hollywood feature is rarely more than a month or two; giant-screen films typically run for at least four or five years, and a few have remained in active distribution for decades. The studios hope to recoup most of their production and marketing expenses within a matter of weeks, whereas few LF films are expected to break even in the first year of release. Studio features have marketing budgets that can be ten times the size of the full production budget for an average LF film, and their DMR versions can open on as many as 100 screens on the same day. Most LF films never reach 100 bookings in their lifetimes. If they don't recoup their costs in theaters, Hollywood films have extensive non-theatrical income sources, such as pay-per-view, cable, airlines, home video, and broadcast television, only a few of which are available to LF films.

So when seven studio films open in a single year, they can easily command more than 600 bookings, nearly matching the 660 bookings made by the 124 other LF films in release. Note that we are not counting as "studio films" Disney's Roaring Mars or Deep Sea 3D, co-produced by Imax and Warner Bros. Pictures, although both had day-and-date releases in dozens of theaters and substantially larger marketing pushes than most independent LF distributors could afford.

The difference in the rollout strategies is a direct consequence of the distinct markets being served. The studios' main customers for DMR releases are the same multiplex operators who show their conventional films. Cinema chains account for two thirds of all DMR bookings, on average. The remaining third is split between commercial standalone theaters (roughly 18%) and institutional theaters (about 15%).

For producers of original LF films, this ratio is reversed: institutional bookings typically account for between 50% and 60%, with the standalones running between 20% and 30% and multiplexes making up the remainder.

The needs and operating practices of these theater types drive their decision making and booking patterns. Museum theaters (and to a lesser degree, standalones) plan and book much farther ahead than cinema chains. To serve school groups and to coordinate with exhibit openings, among other reasons, theater schedules are often set a year or more in advance. This explains in part why last winter's Night at the Museum opened in only ten museums, despite the obvious connection: it was announced only two months before opening, when most institutional theaters that might have considered it were already committed to Happy Feet or other titles.

Unlike multiplex operators, few institutions will book an LF film sight unseen. Most want to screen and audience-test the final version of a film in their own theater before deciding. Unlike the studios, LF distributors rarely provide national or international marketing campaigns for their films, leaving the marketing to each theater, and taking a substantially smaller lease fee than Hollywood films command. As a result, there is usually no strong incentive for theaters to book an LF film in its first month – or even year – of release or for distributors to arrange simultaneous day-and-date openings.

Thus a typical non-DMR LF film will win about half of all its bookings in the first year, a quarter in year two, an eighth in year three, with the rest trailing out into years four and five. (See Chart 2) Looking at 3D films (see Chart 3), we see that they follow roughly the same pattern, but average 50% more bookings than 2D.

In contrast, although the DMR versions usually stay on screen longer than the 35mm, Hollywood films almost never run longer than four months. Virtually the only exceptions have been The Polar Express, which, with Santa Vs. the Snowman, has filled the long-sought niche of the perennial holiday film, and Apollo 13, which has earned a handful of bookings each year since becoming the first DMR title in 2002. Disney has also leased Beauty and the Beast a few times since its 2002 re-release.

However, in a time when funding original films is becoming more difficult, the lack of "wide" openings has become something of an obstacle to landing effective sponsorship deals. Sponsors generally like to get their message out within a certain time window, so they can plan most of their spending within that time frame. This creates pressure, if not for day-and-date openings, at least for compressing release windows. MacGillivray Freeman's Lutz gives the example of Hurricane on the Bayou: in its sponsorship deal, The Weather Channel agreed to run a certain number of promotional spots for the film on its cable network in 2007. Obviously, this provides a strong incentive for theaters to book the film this year, rather than wait.

Lutz says there are no technical, financial, or logistical reasons why independent producers couldn't arrange wide day-and-date openings of their LF films the way the studios do. Given the choice, he'd rather make 100 bookings in one year than over five years, but not at the expense of what's best for the theaters (and ultimately, MFF): "If you give a theater five years...to find the best possible place to schedule a film, they're more likely to find it than if you give them five weeks."

If filmmakers can find flexible and far-seeing sponsors who will understand the needs of institutional theaters and offer incentives that make wide openings feasible and mutually beneficial, we may see a trend toward frontloaded distribution of giant-screen films. The Giant Screen Cinema Association's Industry Development Committee is working to establish a set of consistent theater "deliverables" that filmmakers will be able to offer potential sponsors to help create such incentives.

Institutional vs. commercial

If institutional theaters never played Hollywood films and commercial theaters never ran original LF titles, the two segments would co-exist peacefully, each serving its respective customers. However, the real world is not so neat, and theaters book the films they think will appeal to their audiences, even if it means "crossing over." The only group that has not done so is theme park theaters, the smallest of the four main segments, with only 24 screens. No theme park has ever shown a DMR or Disney title. Most run only one or two films during their six- to ten-month seasons, and they tend to book older (and less-expensive) crowd-pleasing classics. If offered Hollywood films, they probably found the lease rates unacceptably high.

Unsurprisingly, institutional theaters are relatively discriminating in their films choices. Of 121 institutional IMAX theaters worldwide, more than 70 (60%) have never booked a DMR film. Nor, of course, have any of the world's 90 non-IMAX non-commercial theaters, who are not offered those films. We can observe few trends in the museums' choices of DMR films, other than a general aversion to R-rated titles. They are not becoming more or less popular over time, and decisions are being made on a case-by-case basis. The Polar Express and Superman Returns are the two most popular so far, with 36 and 20 institutional bookings respectively. But another comic book favorite, Batman Begins in 2005, was among the least popular, with only seven bookings. Last year's (R-rated) V for Vendetta won no institutional bookings, and the more family-friendly and popular Open Season got only eight.

These days, most multiplex theaters show nothing but DMR films. Among the top chains, only Cinemark USA has made the effort to include original LF films in its IMAX schedules, developing group sales and marketing expertise at the local theater level. A few regional chains have also done so, notably Michigan's Celebration Cinema. But of 102 multiplex IMAX theaters worldwide, more than 30% have never shown an original LF film. And in 2006 more than 70% either showed DMR films exclusively or included just one or two of the Imax/Warner co-productions like Magnificent Desolation, NASCAR, or Deep Sea 3D in the mix, but no titles from independent producers.

All but a few of the 46 standalone IMAX theaters have shown DMR films, and all regularly show original films as well. Many of them are associated with nearby institutions, giving them a market for the documentary-style nature and science films, but the flexibility to book commercial films also.

Market penetration

Table 6 on page 5 shows the market penetration data we began reporting in 2004's Yearbook. A word about the numbers and how they were reached.

Calculating the percentage of possible theaters a given film has reached is complicated by several factors, the primary one being the multiple film formats embraced under the "large-format" rubric. Since not all films are distributed in 8/70, and even fewer are printed to 10/70, it would be inappropriate to count those theaters against a film's potential market. Also, older films that are no longer active had a smaller universe of theaters available to them.

So to calculate penetration, we took the starting date of each film's latest (or last) booking, and counted the number of theaters open on that date. (This ensures that each film is measured against the actual number of theaters it could have reached by the end of its active life.) Penetration is the number of theaters that booked the film divided by the total number of theaters open at that time. If the film was distributed in 8/70 and/or 10/70, theaters with those formats are counted in the All Bookings total. We also present columns that show penetration in 15/70 theaters only, 8/70 theaters only, and both 8/70 and 15/70 (but not 10/70). The top 20 films released since 1997 are shown in each column. (Before 1997 our bookings data are incomplete.)

Measuring penetration naturally favors older films that have had a chance to work their way through the worldwide circuit of LF theaters. Recently released films will rarely have as high a penetration number as older titles.

Because the table covers a relatively long time-frame, familiar titles remain at the top of the lists: Everest, Mysteries of Egypt, T-Rex, and Space Station, although their order has shifted slightly. The most notable addition to this year's table is the appearance of 2006's Superman Re- turns, which is the only DMR film besides The Polar Express to make it into the top 20 in 15/70 penetration.

Note

The average booking lengths referred to in this article were calculated by combining contiguous listings (which are shown as separate entries in our regular bookings lists) and excluding from the count

- Bookings that started before the year being averaged;
- Bookings for which we did not have precise start and end dates;
- Film festival screenings;
- School bookings (films shown irregularly to school groups, but which are not on the regular public schedule);
- Destination films with extremely long runs at their home theaters;
- Bookings in theaters that opened after Jan. 1, 2006.

This left 1,111 records from which we calculated the average booking lengths in days, based on the starting date of the booking.

Acknowledgements

LF Examiner's bookings data would be substantially less complete without the nearly universal cooperation of the LF industry's distributors. I would like to extend special thanks to the following individuals who cheerfully and promptly supply me with data every month.

The data on the following pages are not warranted to be comprehensive or accurate in every detail, despite our best efforts to make them so. They have been compiled from surveys of LF theaters, distributors, the world wide web, and other sources.

We will make every effort to improve the thoroughness, accuracy, and usefulness of these data. If your theater or film is not shown here, please get in touch with us to update our listings.

Where a date is not shown, it means that no date was provided by the source or, in the case of a closing date, that no date has been set, or that the run is indefinite.
